

Lippes Mathias Wexler Friedman LLP Launches Immigration Law Blog

April 11, 2018 | PRESS RELEASES

BUFFALO, NY – Lippes Mathias Wexler Friedman LLP has launched a new immigration law blog on its website. The blog is authored by the firm’s immigration practice team, including attorneys Eileen M. Martin, Andrew M. Wilson, Nisha V. Fontaine and Elizabeth M. Klarin, and offers updates on new developments and regulations in U.S. immigration as well as legal perspective on upcoming challenges for both businesses and individuals. Recent blog posts have focused on the challenges created by the current U.S. immigration environment, and proactive solutions to avoid pitfalls and problems.

“With the U.S. immigration landscape rapidly changing, impacted businesses and individuals need to stay a step ahead of developments,” said Eileen M. Martin, partner and immigration practice team leader. “We are seeing the increased need for guidance firsthand, and meeting these challenges by doubling the size of our immigration practice in less than a four-month period earlier this year.”

The immigration blog allows visitors to subscribe to receive emailed updates when a new post is published, as well as easily navigate to each author’s contact information to easily reach out for more direct support.

In addition to immigration, Lippes Mathias also has blogs covering corporate law and family business, which provide attorney insights on relevant issues affecting all types of business entities and current legal trends and developments.
